

If you Give a School District a School Bus

Written and

By Ira Wren

If you give a School District
a School Bus,

They will ask for some students to ride in it.

When you give them some students,

They will probably ask for a school.

~~Prison~~ School

Once they have a school,

They will ask for some teachers.

Then they will want a terrible software company that constantly breaks,

So they can send useless emails to the students.

That ends up costing more than the budget, so they will probably lower school lunch quality.

When students complain about the food, they let the students out to get food for themselves. The students start leaving. They spend lots of money at fast food restaurants. So much that the restaurants raise prices!

Anger School

When that happens, homeschool families will be low on money from buying too-expensive food.

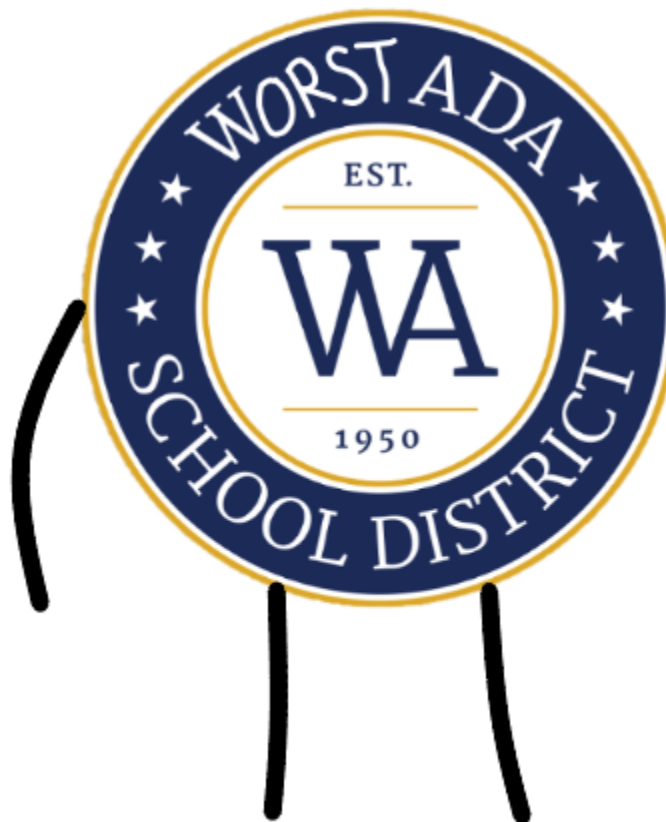

They might not even have the money to continue homeschooling their children!

Bulk Lunchables

$80

Bulk School Foods

~~$100~~
$50

Buying bulk Lunchables is more expensive than the district's school lunches, after all.

They'll probably look for schools to put their children in. When the district hears about that, they'll want to make their schools look really good so the parents choose them! They might even fund the Theatre Department for the week!

The district will lie about their quality through their useless emails. When they are finished, the students' computers will crash from all of the emails and all of the new students using the terrible software.

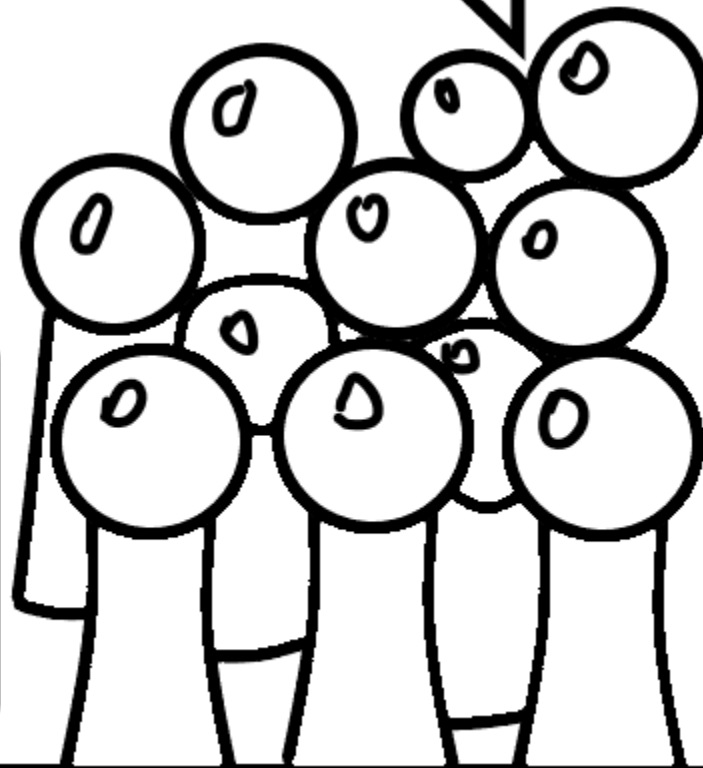

The school district will remember that now they have all of those new students.

And chances are if a school district has a lot of students,

They're going to want some school buses to drive them.
